

Scheduling Problem Statement

Author: Trevon Darby

Problem Statement

- Students need an better way to complete their schedule after advising. Depending on their schedule outside of school students may struggle finding times that fit.

Who is experiencing the problem

- Every student that had things in their life that dictates their school schedule

What is the problem

- When searching for classes the school provides you a list of times that are available for that class, and comparing that to your schedule can be complicated and may cause scheduling conflict if not carefull. I suggest a way of indicating what times you can't take classes and the site only showing you times that don't conflict.

Where does the problem present itself

- The problem presents itself when you have to schedule your classes after advising.

Why does it matter

- It matters because scheduling conflicts that cause you to latter have to re register for the class during a different time may cause problems with getting the class all together.
